Title: SPECIAL SESSION: Using a Solomon Four-Group Design to Test an Intervention for Homeless Adolescents

Keywords: Solomon four-group design, homeless adolescents and intervention research

Description/Overview: The purpose of this session is to describe what a Solomon four-group design is, and to identify the advantages and disadvantages of using this design in research. Several examples will be provided of lessons learned in applying this unique design to a longitudinal test of an intervention for homeless adolescents.

References:

Organizer
Lynn Rew, EdD
The University of Texas at Austin
School of Nursing
Professor
Austin TX
USA

Author Summary: Donna Lynn Rew, EdD has successfully directed dynamic research teams, funded by NIH, since 1999, including two longitudinal studies (R01 HD39554 and R01 NR009856) that addressed health-risk behaviors (substance use and risky sex) in rural adolescents, nearly half of whom were Mexican-Americans.
Any relevant financial relationships? No
Signed on 04/15/2019 by Donna Lynn Rew