Sigma Theta Tau International, Inc.

Sigma Theta Tau International is pleased to present the first annual "Perspectives on Recent Doctoral and Nursing Doctoral Programs". Designed as a valuable reference for all Sigma Theta Tau members, the "Perspectives" section in each issue discusses recent developments in nursing education and practice.

We are changing from listing recent doctorates with each issue to publishing a comprehensive newsletter of all doctorate programs in the United States. Each year, a newsletter will be published summarizing the results from January 1990 to December 31, 1990, as well as those received in the last year which were reviewed in the first time.

We begin this Perspectives by listing nursing doctoral programs in the United States and outside the U.S. The list includes:

- state's name
- number of degree granting programs
- type of degree each program offers
- type of school each program offers

Who follows is the list of recent nursing doctorates followed by degrees earned in the state where the institution is located.

by the National Council of States of Nursing, the American Nurses Association, and the American Association of Colleges of Nursing. The list was compiled by the authors of the book "Nursing: An Introduction to Practice," published by Appleton-Century-Crofts. The data were collected through a survey of nursing schools and a review of the literature. The list includes the names of the authors, the titles of their theses, and the institutions where they earned their degrees. The list covers the years 1983 and 1985, and it includes programs in nursing with doctoral degrees. The list also includes comments on the research areas and methodologies used in the studies. The list is intended to provide a comprehensive overview of the doctoral programs in nursing at that time, and it serves as a valuable resource for students and researchers in the field.

In 1948, her book "Nursing for the Future" recommended that professional schools of nursing be established at universities and that clinical nursing specialties be developed. She also wrote books on patient care and was internationally known as a lecturer and consultant.

Esther L. Brown, Social Anthropologist

Esther Lucile Brown, an author, educator and social anthropologist whose contributions led to major changes in nursing education and practice, died July 6 at Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center in San Francisco. She was 92 years old and lived in San Francisco.

Virginia Henderson, Delta Mu, Yale U., described as a national treasure in nursing, will be interviewed by Susan Revery, professor of history at Wellesley College and author of Order to Care: A History of American Nursing 1830-1955 on September 19, 6 - 9 pm at the Sheraton Hotel, Lexington, MA. Henderson has lived through and helped mold the changes in the nursing profession over the past seventy years. She is highly regarded as a nursing pioneer.
