Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.

Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.

Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.

Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.

Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.

Group Empowerment and Significance to Nursing Practice and Education

- The nursing literature describes individual, community, and organizational empowerment.
- Nursing empowerment has been described as an oppressed, vulnerable group worldwide for years.
- The purpose of the presentation is to review the current status of empowerment in nursing.
- Group empowerment, conceptualized as an active process, is defined as empowerment capacity and the ability to use that capacity (capability).
- The ability to independently increase one’s own empowerment.