Conclusion: Team leadership is regarded as an essential component of leadership and an integral aspect of the nursing academic's role. A person must first be able to lead himself/herself, before the next level of effective team leadership can be attained.